Helping to Bring Justice to Bosnia

The brutality in war torn Bosnia has gripped the world's attention. How could former neighbors and friends, who had lived together for centuries, have grown to hate one another so much?

Freedom Magazine, in conjunction with the Citizens Commission on Human Rights \(CCHR\), has been investigating and exposing the origins and causes of this genocidal conflict since 1992.

At that time, members of CCHR realized that others interpreting events had failed to understand the parallel between the ethnic cleansing campaign of Bosnian Serb leader and psychiatrist Radovan Karadzic and the racial hygiene programs of Hitler's psychiatric puppeteers.

By 1993, CCHR had gathered extensive evidence of the atrocities being committed under Karadzic and in June that year petitioned the United Nations to push forward and create an International War Crimes Tribunal.

After the tribunal was convened in November 1994, members of CCHR worked directly with the official investigators to provide the evidence which resulted in the indictment of Karadzic himself.

While many talk about human rights abuses during such outbursts of tyranny, Scientologists were among those doing something in Bosnia.

Back home, in the U.S., our constitutional freedoms will endure as long as those who cherish and respect them keep alive the notion that freedom exists only in the presence of responsibility.
